Julia Preston Brumley Study Abroad Scholarship

American Studies majors and minors are encouraged to apply for the Julia Preston Brumley scholarship. The $3,000 award will help off-set the cost of studying abroad for a summer, semester, or academic year.

“Interacting with another culture and talking about the U.S. to someone who has never experienced it firsthand gave me a new perspective, as well as a deeper understanding of my own American identity... it's truly a life changing experience, and you may end up considering your host country a second home!”

- Taylor Marks, American Studies Major

SELECTION CRITERIA

The Julia Preston Brumley scholarship will be awarded to UNC American Studies students participating on an approved summer, semester, or academic year study abroad program through the UNC Study Abroad Office. Candidates will be assessed based on their goals, academic merit, and financial need.

APPLICATIONS

To be considered for the scholarship, submit an application for a UNC Study Abroad program and submit the scholarship application by the posted deadline.

ELIGIBLE PROGRAMS

There are many study abroad programs available suitable for earning American Studies credit. Study indigenous populations in Australia, take American Studies courses from the European perspective, or study American culture in an international context in Asia. As long as your coursework is relevant to American Studies, the program can qualify for the scholarship.
